

MRS. LAIR GIVEN THREE-YEAR TERM IN STATE PRISON

Morrisville Woman to Serve
Time at Clinton,
N. J.

FOR EMBEZZLEMENT

Charges Involve Funds of The Joint Bridge Commission

TRENTON, N. J., June 3.—Mrs. Helen Paff Lair, wife of Councilman Harry M. Lair, of Morrisville, and prominent in the social and business world, was sentenced to three years in the State Prison by Judge Schroth yesterday. She had previously admitted 19 charges of forgery and four of embezzlement.

At Mrs. Lair's request the sheriff's office speeded her transfer so that she remained in the County Jail only a few minutes after she was sentenced. She will spend two weeks in quarantine at the New Jersey State Home for Girls, after which she will be transferred to the Clinton Reformatory for Women to serve out her term.

The woman betrayed little emotion as the penalty was imposed. The total involved in the indictments approximates $3,300, and includes two charges involving assets of the Joint Commission for the Elimination of Toll Bridges. Her former employer, S. E. Kaufman, is a member of that body. Mrs. Lair was secretary for the Kaufman Investment Company for some years and had enjoyed the utmost confidence of her employer.

Martin P. Devlin, the woman's counsel, made a stirring plea for leniency, and indicated that "her whole story has never been told." He, however, did not volunteer a further explanation.

Devlin told the court that Mrs. Lair had suffered untold torture in the last few months and had suffered a greater penalty than the court could possibly impose. He declared: "Mrs. Lair has suffered all the punishment she could suffer as the result of her crimes and she has learned her lesson."

While reminding counsel that he was taking into consideration both sides of the woman's character, Judge Schroth declared that the protection of the community does not call for undue vengeance although it does demand justice, and justice evenly dispensed by the court.

The three-year penalty consisted of a term of one year each on two charges of forgery and another for embezzlement. On the remaining 11 indictments, the court suspended sentence.

Just before she turned away to start her sad journey to the prison, Mrs. Lair forced a smile. A relative hurried to her side to hand her a coat. A sister was waiting with her auto outside the jail and Thomas Conrad, a deputy in the sheriff's office, and Mrs. Cora Huber, court attendant, accompanied them to the prison for commitment.

Mrs. Lair, who is 37 years old, lives at 231 West Bridge Street, Morrisville. The sums involved in the indictments ranged from $50 to $540. When Mr. Kaufman conducted a department store on South Broad Street, Mrs. Lair held a responsible position there. Her misdeeds were revealed after an auto accident in April, 1932, that caused her absence from business for some time and prompted an audit of her books.

BUCKS COUNTY REPUBLICAN WOMEN AND GUESTS LEARN OF COUNTY JAIL AND THE ALMSHOUSE IN THIRD SERIES OF "BUCKS CO. STUDIES ITSELF"

District Attorney Arthur M.
Eastburn Speaks to Group
At Doylestown

LEHIGH WOMEN THERE

Lester D. Thorne, Bristol Trust
Company Cashier, Speaks
On Banking

DOYLESTOWN, June 3.—With several prominent members of the Lehigh County Council of Republican Women as its guests yesterday, Bucks County Council of Republican Women staged an excellent informative program in the Doylestown Country Club.

The visitors from Lehigh County, including Miss Nonamaker, president of Lehigh County Council, and Mrs. Elizabeth DeGroot, a former president of that council, were guests at luncheon of officers of the local council.

The large gathering of women interested in the welfare of their county, state and nation, again studied Bucks County, hearing the third address in a series "Bucks County Studies Itself." The speaker yesterday was district attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, who gave information regarding the county jail and county almshouse. At the last two sessions of the council the women studied the county courts and the row offices, the respective speakers being the Honorable Hiram H. Keller, and Honorable Calvin S. Boyer.

Mr. Eastburn yesterday afternoon in giving figures relative to the county jail located here told that the building is located on a three-acre tract which was purchased by the county in 1884, the new buildings taking the place of the former jail which was located on the site of the present court house. The new buildings were opened for use in 1885. The height of the wall was given at 28 feet. The speaker told of the layout of the jail property, with the sheriff's residence (that of the custodian), being located at the front of the property, just inside the wall. Juveniles, instead of being housed in the jail property as was done years ago, are now provided for in the house of detention, the home of the probation officer. The women were informed the jail is built in the form of the letter T, with the women's quarters to the left of the entrance, nine cells being found there, while on the right are 12 double cells for men. Twenty-six double cells are on the main cell block. It was mentioned that women are not confined to their cells, but have the use of such as well as the corridor adjoining.

For use of the prisoners there are 600 books in the library. A stone pile outside the cell block provides exercise during one hour of each morning and afternoon. One-half hour of recreation is also provided twice daily. In truck patches within the prison walls vegetables are raised, and used for

TWO UPSETS OCCUR IN THE TWILIGHT LEAGUE

"Hiboes" Score Win Over
Edgely, 8-1; Teams
Now Tie

JEFFERSON WINS TILT

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE

Results of last night's games

Hibernians, 8; Edgely, 1

Jefferson, 11; Independents, 4

Two upsets occurred in the Bristol Twilight League last night. On Sullivan's field the Hibernians scored an 8-1 victory over the Edgely A. C. and on St. Ann's field, the Independents were trounced by the youthful Jefferson A. C., 11-4.

The defeat to the Edgely team showed them into a tie with the Hibernians for second place while the St. Ann's team took undisputed possession of first place.

It was not "Johnny" Harmsen's fault that the Edgely team was defeated. Harmsen hurled good ball limiting the winners to but three hits. His mates made seven errors behind him and all helped the Hibernian total to mount. Harmsen struck out seven batters.

Dave Ennis tossed them in for the Hibernians and gave the Edgelyites but two safe blows both of which should have been easy put-outs. The run scored by the losers was unearned and Ennis should have hurled a no-run, no-hit game.

The game on St. Ann's field was a farce. The Independents gave a poor exhibition of baseball, missing almost everything that went their way. The youthful Jefferson team pushed across six runs in the fifth inning that paved the way for victory.

Bud Wright with two triples led the hitters of the night while Tosti and Antonelli made two bingles each for the losers.

BEAUTIFICATION OF THE HIGHWAYS IS HEARD OF

Garden Section of Travel Club
Listens to State
Forester

BURGESS ALSO SPEAKS

Beautification of highways was the subject brought before women of the Garden Section of Bristol Travel Club in the club home yesterday, on which occasion a state forester of Pennsylvania, T. Russell Albright, was the speaker. Mr. Albright showed slides, in which highway beautification was stressed, and gave much information regarding such to the gathering. Mrs. Earl H. Tomb, chairman of the garden section, presided.

The first part of the afternoon program included musical numbers, these being: Piano solo, "A Country Garden" (Granger), Mrs. Marburg D. Weagley; vocal solo, "In the Time of Roses," and "A Garden in the Rain," Mrs. Charles I. Bowen; flute solo, "Valse" (Godard), Miss Dorothy Willaman with Mrs. J. J. Willaman as accompanist.

Mr. Albright in his opening remarks explained how approaches to towns, banks along the state highways, and bare places can be made attractive by planting of shrubs, evergreens, flowers, trees. Wild honeysuckle is used extensively in this work throughout Pennsylvania he told, as well as coral berries, Virginia creeper, and others. "These plants maintain a balance on the state highways, as they give a pleasing appearance; and without such vegetation erosion would result to a large degree." Many dollars are saved to the state by planting of such. It was brought out.

The trimming of trees by the state foresters was gone into, this being done for safety's sake and for appearances. Other plants and trees used extensively in state work were mentioned as: pink and white ramblers, pine trees, laurel, forsythia, snow berry, etc. Where soil is poor, top soil and fertilizer are placed before the shrubs are planted. The state workers endeavor to keep attractive scenic views unobstructed stated Mr. Albright; and part of their work is to remove dead trees and stumps. He told that during one year there were 25,000 objectionable signs removed from along the Pennsylvania highways.

Burgess Clifford L. Anderson was also introduced by Mrs. Tomb. The Burgess informed that he is heartily in accord with the work of the garden section, which is trying to make Bristol more beautiful. He referred to a ride with four members of the section about the streets of the town in which the attractive lawns and flower beds of the homes were noted. "Some dumps are beyond all reason," added the Burgess, who also told that he desired all residents of the borough to show civic pride, and endeavor to make the borough more attractive.

Mrs. Bowen led in the singing of "America the Beautiful."

Members of the hospitality committee, under direction of Mrs. Joseph McCarron, chairman, served punch and cake.

700 BOYS HEAR SAFETY TALKS AT BIG MEETING HERE

Speakers Caution About Trespassing on Railroad and Taking Chances

POLICEMEN FRIENDLY

Boys Urged to Consult Them
For Their Invariably
Good Advice

"Safety First—Safety Always." That is the slogan adopted at the safety meeting held in the Grand Theatre yesterday afternoon under the direction of Superintendent of Public Safety, James L. McGee.

There were 700 boys from the parochial and public schools of Bristol assembled at the theatre, loaned for the occasion through the courtesy of Edward J. Lynn, manager.

"Don't ride bicycles on highways. Don't roller skate on the highways. Don't play baseball in the streets. Use the vacant lots."

The above were stressed at the meeting by Superintendent McGee at the conclusion of the meeting.

One accident occurred at the safety meeting but it was not of a serious nature. A boy thoughtlessly threw his arm across the back of the adjoining seat. His arm was caught in the space between and the seat had to be removed before the arm was freed.

The incident was told to the boys by Howard A. James, superintendent of public schools, who urged the boys to use their eyes and ears. Mr. James expressed his appreciation for the manner in which the boys marched through the streets from the schools to the theatre. He complimented the patrol boys for their work and told the youngsters to be careful, this summer, of the river, railroad or in the theatre.

"Respect the people who are in authority; respect the policemen and you will have a better time this summer."

The next speaker was Dr. Harrison, surgeon of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

"A week ago one of your buddies was killed on the railroad," said the speaker. "I have been a doctor for 18 years and I haven't yet learned to like the sight of blood or see agony."

Then the doctor cautioned the boys to keep off the railroad. "It is no place to play. This is an age of progress and trains now traveling through here go at the rate of 60, 70 and 75 miles per hour. They are propelled by electricity and they run much smoother and make little noise. The thrill and romance of adventure is past. Those high wires have 132,000 volts of electricity passing through them. Kite strings are dangerous coming in contact with them. Overhead bridges are dangerous. Don't drop strings or wires from them. The railroad is not a safe place to play on; it is safe for travel.

Caution against stone throwing was also emphasized.

Lieutenant Thomas Hanley, Philadelphia Police Training School, told of the policeman's relation to the boys. "Boys in a thoughtless manner take too many risks. Obey your teachers and parents. Don't be too anxious to take a dare and follow the leader. Stop, look and listen.

"Policemen want you to play and have fun. Keep off the railroad, and the highways. Be careful at the river and while in swimming. You boys in this section have plenty of places to play."

Assistant District Attorney Edward J. Biester, Bucks County, told of the complaints received about boys here trespassing on the railroad. There are a number of men interested in your safety as is shown by this meeting this afternoon.

"If you throw a stone at a train and hit it you can be sent to jail for five or 10 years. If you throw a stone and kill a person you are guilty of murder.

"Be clear cut American boys. Play and have fun but remember it is 'Safety First.'"

SUMMERLESS YEARS

After meteorological records have been kept for centuries it may be possible to surmise with some degree of accuracy that certain years will be marked by extraordinary weather conditions. But it is a bit premature to rush to the conclusion because spring has been belated, that this is to be "a year without a summer," like 1816. It will be better to wait until after July and August before putting 1933 in that class.

So many myths have been circulated concerning 1816 that it is gratifying to obtain an unvarnished account of the freaks of the weather in that year. Such a report is available in a diary kept by Elisha Risdon, of Hopkinton, N. Y., a part of which has recently been published. His entries show that snow fell on June 6 and June 8, while under date of June 14 he wrote: "It has frozen every night since June came in, except a few rainy, foggy nights." June 28 there was a little frost. The backwardness of the crops caused alarm in July. On August 24 he wrote: "Considerable frost. Vines and even corn in some places are ruined."

One reason why there is expectation in some quarters that this is to be a "summerless year" is that for eight successive years temperatures east of the Rocky Mountains have been generally above normal. The theory is entertained that to compensate for the high temperatures there must be a season of unusually low thermometer readings. But too little is known with regard to definite laws of sequence of weather conditions over an extended period of years to warrant the forming of conclusions.

THE WIDE, WIDE WORLD

Do not be distressed overmuch by news of evil. This is a wide, wide world. It contains much that is bad, but more that is good. Righteousness is slowly, but surely, triumphing over sin.

If you do not believe that, or merely have not realized it, turn for a moment to contemplation of happier things. Turn your tired eyes from the day's record of evil to the day's golden roll of honor. There is more of good news than of bad news today, every day. There is more to see on the sunny side, and it is more worth seeing.

There are only two reasons for gazing at ugly things; either that we may more fully know evil when we meet, even in gilded robes; or that we may grapple with it and blot it out.

Broad highroads of honor lead to every worthy goal of life. The mud roads are in the lowlands, leading only to dissolution and corruption. If we travel the mud road it is at our own volition.

Sin is not the harvest of life. It is the chaff threshed from the wholesome grain and will be swept from the threshing floor. Why look upon the chaff when the grain is there?

If some days the volume of chaff seems greater than others, know that the threshing has been more thorough.

This is a wide, wide world, and full of sweetness for those who would find it.

He isn't a born politician unless he thinks the first person singular is unanimous.

HOLLYWOOD, . . . For all the talk of teaming up, Dorothy Jordan's first picture at R. K. O.

will not be with Joel McCrea. She'll play the feminine lead with Lionel Barrymore in "The Doctor."

The decision came about suddenly when the studio found it was able to get Barrymore earlier than had been expected. Production plans were rushed and director John Robertson hopes to get started almost immediately.

Merian C. Cooper makes it plain that the new film does not mean the abandonment of the idea to co-star Dorothy and Joel. No story was ready for them, and the head-man of R. K. O. was anxious not to keep Dorothy off the screen any longer. It's already been several months since she signed her contract. That hasn't cost R. K. O. anything, however. She gets paid so much a picture.

An epidemic of George Kaufman anecdotes is going the rounds in Hollywood. The best of them is about the time Kaufman recently attended a revival of one of his plays.

It was a bad company, particularly the leading man. At the end of the first act, the author could stand it no longer. He rushed out and sent the actor the following wire: "Am sitting in the back row. Wish you were here."

HOLLYWOOD PARADE:

Another actor was tested yesterday for Garbo's leading man in "Queen Christina." Who do you think it was?—Bruce Cabot.

Strange things about Garbo. While other movie stars drive around in sleek, shiny motors, the Swedish actress is chauffeured about in a six year old limousine. Alongside the stinky models of today, it looks high and awkward. . . . One change La Garbo has made, however. She has a new chauffeur since her return from Sweden. At the studio, her troupe will be the same. This was one of her first requests on arriving in Hollywood.

At 4 A. M. this morning, Clark Gable and Dr. Franklyn Thrope were scheduled to leave for Jackson Hole, Wyoming, and the search for grizzlies. I talked with Clark at the studio and he was dubious about finding one in the short time at his disposal. He and the doctor will acquaint themselves with the territory, however, and plan to return in the fall for a month's hunt. As the two men will pack into the wilds, Mrs. Gable is staying home.

Franchot Tone soon will have a hostess for his new Brentwood home. His mother, Mrs. Frank Tone, is coming out for a summer's visit. . . . Vacations are all you hear about. Clarence Brown and Alice Joyce are planning to fly to Mexico for their postponed honeymoon. Instead of using Clarence's plane, they'll make the trip by regular airline. . . . Alexander Kirkland, who is becoming quite the gay blade of the film colony, had Boots Malory dancing at the Cocoanut Grove. It was the first warm night of the year and he sported one of the increasingly popular white mess jackets.

Paulette Goddard was at the Groves, too, holding hands with Charlie Chaplin.

And here's the latest racket of the auto-graph seekers. They ask the stars to let them come to their homes and take Kodak pictures.

"STOLEN LOVE"

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

Joan Hastings, seventeen and beautiful, lives with two old maiden aunts, Evvie and Babe Fleet, in a house long run to seed. Joan, lonely and impressionable, falls in love with Bill Martin, whose social status is far beneath her own. The aunts plan to send her away to school. Bill is arrested, the innocent victim of a bootlegging gang, and Joan, frantically asking for money to bail him out, confesses to her aunts her love for him. Horrified, they put her on a train, bound for school, in charge of a member of the Travelers' Aid Society. Joan slips off the train, and Walter Dunne, a kindly motorist, gives her a ride back home to Sausalito, Cal.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIII.

As Joan settled comfortably beside him in the deeply cushioned seat he reached over and placed a plump, ringed hand on her. "In a minute I'm going to be too busy hitting it up to talk. Now listen, I'm a poor, chicken-hearted fool, but they aren't all like me. I ain't always sprouting wings myself. Take it from your Uncle Walt, and don't go riding in any more strange cars—get me?"

She laughed at him delightedly. "Why—you sound just like Aunt Evvie!"

He started the motor. "Well—next time you take Aunt Evvie's advice."

They sped silently, smoothly over the long gray ribbon of road. He did not speak again, nor did Joan. She was truly grateful for the lift, but her thoughts were all for Bill.

The miles slipped by, every one bringing her nearer—to Bill. "Don't think I've failed you—I'm coming fast—fast as the wind—"

Another woman was coming to Bill. Dolores, with her warm dark eyes, and the cloud of blue black hair, so faintly, finely lined with gray.

"It's my money!" she said suddenly, when Gerwin demurred. "If I take a notion to bail him out, is it anything to you?"

"You're my wife!"

"Oh, forget it!"

"It seems easy for you to forget."

"Don't be a fool."

"I'm no fool," he said stolidly. "It's you."

But he let her go. What else could he do? It was, as she said, her money.

Her dark eyes were hard when she came back to the shop some hours later. "They let him go before I got there. Dropped the whole thing. Didn't remember didn't know anything about it. He said he didn't know who could have pulled for him, but Begoni went to the bat—got it all fixed up."

"I told you you were a fool to get mixed up with it."

"Oh dry up!" she cried in a high, quivering voice.

Her eyes were fixed on the yellow turrets of the Van Fleet house on the hill, just visible through the small, dirty window.

Gerwin followed her brooding gaze. "Old Captain Horner saw—Bill and the little Van Fleet girl up near the Power House once—together."

"Horner's in his second childhood!" she said contemptuously, and burst into tears.

"Don't think I've failed you—I'm coming—fast—fast as the wind!" Joan's love went winging over the miles.

"Joan—wait for me!" the boy panted, as he plowed through the dusty short-cut to the hill.

A night and a day and a night since she had put her slim hands on his shoulders, and kissed him said—"I'll always love you—and I'll never be sorry—ever!" A thousand years . . . she should be on her way East now, but she wasn't. "She'd never go off that way—I know—true blue—she'll be waiting—"

He struggled through the soft sand, grabbed at the root of a tree. There—he was up on the road. The big old house loomed ahead, yellow against the eucalyptus trees.

By the south hedge he stopped, almost expecting to see her waiting there, dear, faithful, loving Joan, too good, all too good for him. . . . "I'm not worthy of touching her dusty shoes!" he thought, extravagantly, and his arms ached to hold her, tightly, tightly, never to let her go again.

He crawled through the hole in the hedge, stood looking wistfully across the lawn. Over there, near the garage, he had kissed her first, in lilac time. He remembered the way she had looked, slim and gold against the purple blossoms. A princess out of a fairy tale.

A lump rose in his throat. "No-body else would ever forgive me—but she will. She won't care. She'll understand. She'll know it wasn't my fault I got mixed up in that dirty Begoni deal—"

An uncontrollable impulse to see her now—this very minute—seized him. He couldn't wait—not another second. There had been too much clandestine meeting. From now on it was going to be right out in the him contemptuously, and all the dead and gone Van Fleets were behind her, creeping out of the shadowy corners of the dim room, looking at him contemptuously too. A long line of them, rich, arrogant, sneering. Sneering at him, who was just Bill Martin, needing a shave, and a haircut.

But he didn't care for that. He wasn't going to let them get the best of him that way. It didn't matter about the Van Fleets. It was Joan . . . she was slipping away from him, turning into a dream. A minute ago she was warm and near. She was part of the warm sun, and the gentle wind. To think of her was to feel her close in his arms, her breath on his cheek. And now he couldn't reach her . . . she was just a young girl who had smiled at him from a window. It was all a dream, a mad dream that had never happened.

He brushed the tumbled hair off his forehead with the back of a open. The devil with the aunts—he'd take Joan away—

He bounded up the front steps, pulled the heavy knocker firmly. Darned if he'd sneak to the back door.

He knocked again.

Miss Evvie Van Fleet answered the door herself. They stood measuring each other for a moment, the thin lipped elderly spinster, and the impetuous, no less determined boy.

"I didn't send for you—yet!" she said. "And we have a back door—for tradesmen and servants."

Bill moved forward, as if to enter the hall. "I didn't come to see you," he said, biting each word off shortly and hurling it at her. "I came to see Joan—and that's why I came the front way!"

"We'll discuss that." She motioned him into the long, dark library, and they stood at opposite sides of the old mahogany table, facing each other.

"Joan is gone. I said she's gone. Don't you understand? Gone!"

"No!" he cried. "She wouldn't go—she'd never have left me that way—"

"She's gone," Evvie said harshly, "on the Overland. She's half way across the United States by now."

"When—" he gulped miserably, "did she go?"

"Yesterday morning."

Bill looked at the towering, square old woman, at the spacious book filled room, and the long red velvet curtains through which the light filtered dimly. Then he looked down at his shapeless old shoes, his rough, scarred hands. He saw Joan again—as he had first seen her—slender and gold and remote against the red curtains.

"Have I been dreaming?" he thought in a sudden, cold despair. "Did I imagine everything?"

He choked. Air—he had to have air! He clutched his cap and brushed roughly past her, for the door.

Her hand, large and strong as a man's, tightened on his shoulder. "Not so fast, young man, not so fast. We're just beginning—"

"She's gone—half way across the continent by now!"

Evvie Van Fleet was looking at

MARY LOU GOES SHOPPING

SHE is only eight, but, even at this tender age Mary Lou is a daily customer at the neighborhood stores. Perhaps it is a package of crackers, and a pound of coffee at the grocer's. Perhaps it is some tooth-paste or toilet soap at the drug store.

Of course Mary Lou doesn't decide on what she is going to buy. Her mother writes a list — this brand of crackers, this brand of coffee, this make of tooth-paste, this kind of soap. She knows the prices, and gives Mary Lou just enough money, with an extra penny or two, perhaps, to spend for herself.

Buying is just as simple and easy as that because of just one thing — Advertising.

Advertising has given all of us a lot to be thankful for.

Because of advertising, people in Texas know about and buy Michigan motor cars. People in New Hampshire buy oranges raised in Florida and California. Because of advertising, merchants and manufacturers are forced to improve their products. It has standardized quality. It has increased consumption and thereby lowered costs. It promotes competition and thereby keeps dealers and merchants wide awake to secure for you the most for your money.

But best of all it writes "Finis" on the business career of any merchant or manufacturer who attempts to fool the public or give them less than value received.

It pays to read all advertisements in this paper

The Pullman Co. Displays Fully-Equipped Cars Here

Showing what The Pullman Company offers to travelers, two fully-equipped Pullman cars were exhibited at the freight station here Thursday, through courtesy of The Pullman Company and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

The public had been invited to inspect the cars, and many, including large groups of school children, took advantage of the invitation.

The Messrs. H. W. Henderson and D. E. Cozzens, traveling passenger agents for The Pullman Company, welcomed the guests, and with the assistance of porters initiated the young folks into the intricacies and conveniences of some late type cars, and showed improvements in said cars to those who had already been initiated.

The Pullman on display was the "Sentinel Range," and the observation car "Central Park." Upholstering schemes throughout were in green, and the observation car was the first to claim attention. With its variegated green tapestry chairs, the last word in comfort; its writing desks, folding observation chairs, fine lighting system with 100 lights to a car, excellent ventilating, water and heating systems, and every feature for safety, this car caused much comment.

It was mentioned to visitors that but one serious accident occurred in The Pullman Company's record for 1932, deaths being caused when a bridge gave way. That The Pullman Company's motto is "Safety First" is shown by the fact that safety meetings are conducted by said company every three months. Cars are maintained by this company on all railroads.

Some berths were displayed as made up for night use, and in other compartments the "day-appearance" featured. Safety ladders were shown to be exceptionally safe.

Women's and men's washrooms, drawing-room, the smoking rooms, sections, etc., were viewed by many. Adjoining the women's lounge was a shower and wash-room. The wash-room for the men was provided with upholstered chairs finished in brown leather. First-aid kits are carried on all cars, and the lighting system is of the latest type.

The Pullman display here Thursday are a far cry from the first Pullman built in 1859, which weighed 10,000 pounds less than the trucks of the present Pullman.

ORGANDIE DRESSES IN MODEST COLORS WILL FEATURE FOR SUMMER

By Alice Langelier
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS—(INS)—This is going to be an organdie summer, the biggest and best the women have had since nearly a century ago. Delightfully fresh and crisp this new-old fabric is coming for entire frocks, for capes and sleeves and every variety of trim.

"Les Ambassadeurs," chic cabaret on the Champs Elysees, was literally full of white organdie dresses on the night of its spring opening.

One of them was particularly effective, a new Chanel model embroidered in fine black scrolls and tiny flowers. This designer is also showing a quantity of lovely pale pink, blue and green organdie gowns with slim-looking bodies almost moulded to the figure and circular skirts taking all their fullness from below the hips.

These fashionable frocks are essentially summery. But the economical woman will be wise to remember that the waxed variety wears far better and looks just as chic. In blue, with a skilfully-cut basque coat, it stands out stiff and smart.

For June week there is a pretty pink and white creation in diminutive flowered pattern with a cross-over cape of plain material. The full skirt calls for a wide-brimmed hat.

For the debutante there is organdie in bold design of burnt orange and blue shaded flowers with straggling green leaves. It is draped over palest yellow taffeta and flares at the hem.

A black wool georgette has entire bishop sleeves and bib and tucker of organdie. It will keep fresh for a few years if no wrap is worn over it. Bows of snowy organdie are very delightful provided they are extremely fresh and clean. Worth puts white organdie sleeves in a soft black taffeta model and the wide tucked belt has a jaunty bow of white at the side.

WHILE having a fanning bee the other night with a local sports enthusiast we got on to the subject of baseball, past and present in and around Bristol, and was informed by my companion about the merits of some of the local ball clubs and players participating in the three leagues operating this season.

My friend said: "There are twelve teams from Bristol represented in either the 'Bristol Twilight,' 'Lower Bucks County' or the 'Suburban League'—and all these clubs have pretty good teams . . . and furnish a great brand of baseball."

"The Lower Bucks County circuit, with six clubs playing, is about as fast as any such group in their class," continued my friend . . . "the teams are all about evenly matched and the games fast, with lots of individual stars on each club."

"Any evening, Saturday or Sunday you can select a game to watch at very little cost . . . and be sure to see real competition . . . the players are out playing their heads off because they like it."

In parting, my baseball friend said: "Don't let anyone tell you that there was more good baseball and more enthusiasm in the old days . . . we have every bit as good teams today and more of them . . . come on out and see a game yourself sometime and I am sure you will agree that I am right." . . . We told him we would.

interested in such a club, but were unable to attend the session.

If sufficient number of residents are found to be interested in the project additional committees will be appointed, and club work gotten underway in the near future.

Those at last night's meeting feel there has long been a need for a beach club in the borough. Those interested in the project state there is centrally located water-frontage property now available, which could be secured for immediate development this summer. There a clean beach, lounging chairs, a float, sand boxes for the children, and whatever other equipment membership warrants could be provided.

It is believed by those starting the movement that such a club would attract summer residents to this borough, and add to the pleasure and sociability of those who already reside here.

meals for the prisoners. During 1932 200 two-quart containers of tomatoes were canned. "The prisoners do all of the painting, repairing, cooking, laundry work, etc.," the district attorney informed. The present cost of caring for prisoners is approximately 23 cents per day, the cost having been lowered from a figure over twice that high several years ago.

Prisoners are admitted on commitments from justices of the peace, the women were told. A complete record of the case is kept by the warden, and each prisoner is required to take a bath as soon as the jail is entered. Those who are awaiting trial do not wear the prison garb of blue shirt and blue and white striped overalls.

Taking up the subject of vagrants, Mr. Eastburn told that between Jan. 1st and April 24th, 434 such were given night's lodging and provided with supper and breakfast at the county jail here. Actual cost per year for upkeep of the jail and matters pertaining to it was given at about $20,000, this including salaries of sheriff, wardens, expenses for prisoners, constables' fees, etc. Four wardens are on duty each day, and two at night.

The county home, or almshouse, which is located on the Doylestown-Willow Grove pike, was next given attention. This property was purchased in 1808, and the first building erected one year later.

The county home farm comprises 360 acres, with 275 of these under cultivation. There are housed in the barns 38 head of Guernsey cattle, 125 or more hogs, horses and mules, 500 chickens. Milk, eggs and produce is for use of the inmates, with the surplus being sold. Last year 27,000 dozens of eggs were garnered it was stated.

The district attorney gave the average age of the inmates as 68. There are now 100 in the men's building, and 68 in the women's building. The latter structure also houses the men who are invalided. One woman has been cared for at the county home for 45 years. The highest number cared for was reached last winter, 184.

In addition to the buildings for the inmates, and the barns, there is a residence for the farmer and his assistant; laundry, and other outbuildings. The steward and his wife preside over the hospital, or women's quarters, and there are located also two female nurses and one male nurse. "The cleanliness of all the buildings impresses one," stated Mr. Eastburn, who continued by telling of the work done by the inmates. The monthly payroll for the home is about $694. Children are usually housed there but for a few days before they are placed elsewhere.

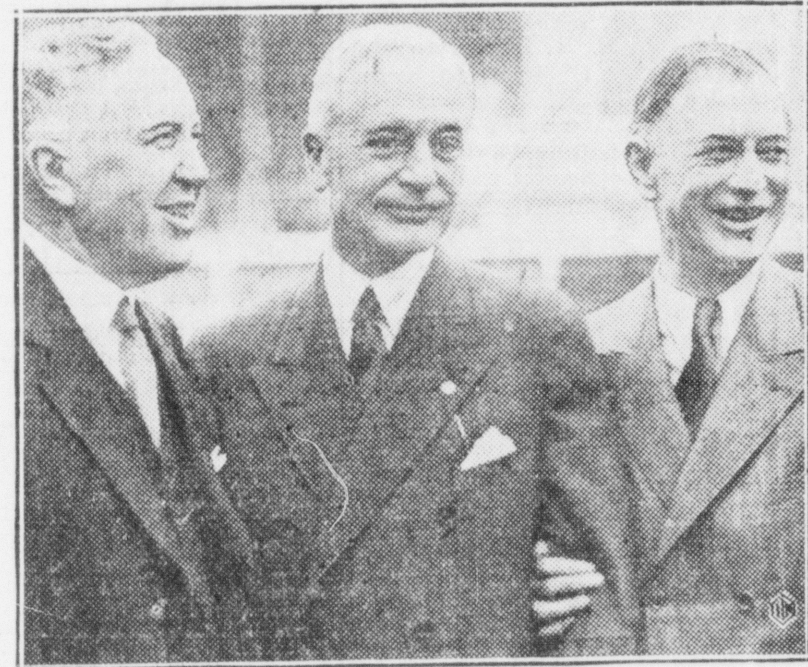

The second speaker of the afternoon was Lester D. Thorne, cashier of Bristol Trust Company. Mr. Thorne told of the plan for Federal guarantee of bank deposits, or bank insurance plan. "Bankers generally are not opposed to the plan for any selfish reason," stated Mr. Thorne, "but the plan is believed impossible after trial in eight states . . . No feasible plan of such has yet been found."

The operation of banks was dealt with to a degree, and the "velocity" of money spoken of. It was told how after money is accumulated by banks from deposits, the money goes into many markets of the nation and world. "The bank loans about 10 times the amount of its deposits," added the banker "for every dollar drawn out the banker must recall 10 from the markets. This is the beginning of deflation if carried far enough, and then follows depression." It was stated by the Bristol man that it is impossible and impractical for a government to insure bank deposits. Different plans were used in all of the eight states trying some form of deposit insurance, and the plans cost the states, and thus the people, hundreds of millions of dollars. Over 100 years ago such a scheme was tried in New York state and failed. It was brought out by the speaker. "Bankers, generally, believe in insurance of deposits, but not under state or government supervision," concluded the cashier.

Members of the Lehigh County council were introduced to the gathering by Mrs. John W. Cooper, Pineville, the presiding officer. Mrs. DeGroot, former president of Lehigh, spoke to the assemblage briefly.

Local numbers were given by Oliver L. Croll, Solebury, these being "Bird Songs at Eventide," "Pale Moon," "Star Eyes" (Speaks), and "Water Boy," with Mrs. E. M. Paxon, Solebury, as accompanist.
